

The proposed decrease in the allowable number of broadcast companies represents ipso facto limitation of the First Amendment rights of Americans. The greater number of media corporations equals a greater number of opinions and views. The more substations owned by fewer major corporations in effect decreases the information available to US citizens and their ability to make informed democratic decisions.